Entrepreneurship Seminar for Foreign Residents: How to Start a Business Without Failing

"One day, I want to run my own restaurant."

"One day, I want to start my own business."

These are dreams often expressed by many people, including foreign residents working in Japan.

However, the reality is not that simple. Recently, immigration laws have been revised, making the path even more challenging. In addition, there have been many cases where someone with strong determination starts a restaurant business but fails, ending up with debt.

So, what kind of plan should be made?

What are the key points to avoid failure in running a business?

These topics will be explained by the presidents and directors of restaurant companies belonging to ORA (Osaka Restaurant Management Association), together with professional entrepreneurship supporters.

The seminar will be held online and can also be viewed via recorded video at a later date.
